

I am convinced that there are some member states that are ready to restart their trade relations with Iran

2

How much readiness and seriousness do you see in European countries to take practical steps toward Iran?

As a representative of the European Parliament I cannot make statements on behalf of the member countries. The parliament has indeed been proactive what comes to the possible establishment of an EU delegation in Iran and/or sending an EU envoy to Tehran.

It depends on what exactly is meant by the „practical steps towards Iran“. I am convinced that there are some member states that are ready to restart their trade relations with Iran. All depends on mutual openness and honesty in fulfilling the Geneva agreement. Generally speaking – European countries are equally ready to either ease the sanctions or continue the sanction regime.

